HOME INDUSTRY.

Some Sensible Remarks from the Silver State.

The growth in Nevada in wealth, population and all else that goes to contribute to our progress as a State, would be enhanced if the people would give more attention to the conserving business interests of the particular localities. We hear much of the lack of patriotism manifested by a community when it does not render a sufficient support to its local newspaper to keep the editor out of the poor house. But we are inclined to believe, in spite of what has been said on the subject from time to time, that the result of the reprehensible policy adopted through want of foresight or any other cause, by a large portion of the population of the smaller towns of buying everything possible in a large city hundreds of miles distant, in disregard to claims of local dealers for their patronage and support, are not sufficiently appreciated, by the people. The most favored condition of material development will fail to build up a town in the absence of a spirit of enterprise to promote the common good, while on the other hand many large business and manufacturing centers throughout the Union, where natural advantages were not the best in their early stages of promotion afford striking examples of what has been accomplished by the zeal and enthusiasm of their citizens as exemplified in determined aggressive action to advance the public weal. Growth and prosperity are interfered with to a deplorable extent in some cases where men are apparently blind to their own interests. For many articles that could be advantageously purchased at home, they will send to some far off establishment, the proprietors of which will not ship the goods until the cash is received, and when a few pounds of sugar or a small quantity of soap, matches or other staple articles are bought from the local dealer the latter is expected to take his pay in butter, eggs or other produce of the highest market rates. Such a course is certainly neither just nor patriotic. It does not pay in dollars and cents either. The buyer usually knows nothing of the reputation or quality of goods dealt in by the distant firm, so of necessity he runs a good deal of risk in purchasing in that way. But when he gives patronage to the merchant who pays taxes in the support of the community, whose interests are identical with those of the town, and to whom the trade rightfully belongs, the customer knows something of the character and antecedents of the man with whom he deals, and is given an opportunity to inspect the goods before buying. The money paid the storekeeper at home goes largely into circulation in the community to help build up the neighborhood and stimulate home enterprise. The bazar stores in big cities are continually reaching out and endeavoring to absorb the trade of smaller towns and villages to make some effort to counteract this outside influence. By showing an active interest in the welfare and development of their section, they can, in a measure, impart their enthusiasm to others and awaken more general interest in local progress. When men shall come to give a more substantial support to their own merchant communities, their towns will grow and flourish to a greater extent than at present, the value of their real estate will advance more rapidly, and the prosperity of their neighborhoods will be more effectually promoted.

A Gala Day.

The people who went to Reno yesterday with the teachers, had a general good time. Two carloads of school children went down, visited the University, Insane Asylum and took a good look at C. C. Powning, Bill Thompson and other curios of Washoe. They came home last evening pretty tired and hungry.

Stricture treated with phenomenal success by a new method.

Dr. Fox,

Corbett-Jackson.

The contest before the California Club on the 21st is exciting intense interest in San Francisco. The betting is 10 to 8 on Jackson and the result is considerable of a puzzle to the wisest sports.

Jackson is regarded as the better man because of the prestige of several victories. The two men are almost the same in weight, height and reach.

Corbett is regarded as a cleverer sparer of the two and his youth ought to tell in a long fight against Jackson's fast living during the past year. But he has rather a loose guard for the lower part of his body, the place where Jackson is the most fond of landing. It is almost impossible to hit Jackson's body and he don't mind blows on the head.

Corbett whipped Choynskle with one hand, but it was at long range and whenever Choynskle rushed him he had to retreat or go to pieces. He avoided in-fighting and Jackson is the most remarkable in-fighter in the world. At the same time with one hand broken he was able to avoid punishment and came through a long battle with hardly a scratch.

Considering the points of the two men, there is hardly enough difference to justify the odds being laid on Jackson. Jackson's prestige seems to be scaring Corbett's backers.

Found Dead in a Hotel.

NAPA, May 13.—H. Pugh, a native of Germany, aged 46 years, was found dead in his room at the Palace Hotel this afternoon. At a late hour last night he entered the hotel, took a drink at the bar and after visiting the room of an acquaintance he went to his own room about 2 o'clock in the morning. When found he lay on the floor as though he had dropped dead. He was accustomed to drink heavily and said that he would kill himself, but it is not believed that he did.

Mr. Pugh was formerly a clerk in the Arlington House in this city.
